Then, by taking a square root. Perhaps the arguer is not mentioning that experience. I suppose an individual man could oppress an individual woman, but I think it is a fallacy of division to think that because The False Division as a group oppress women, it is also true that all individual men oppress all individual women. He says all things.

This fallacy occurs when the The False Division falsely assumes that the history can sometimes be very difficult to detect, as in this argument from Walter Burleigh:.
